15-bed unit sought for Haliburton

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

The expansion of Haliburton Hospital to accommodate about 15 long-term care beds should be fast-tracked and proceed immediately, the province has been told.

Last Tuesday, the Haliburton County Planning and Development Committee passed a resolution recommending the immediate construction of a long-term care addition.

The $1.5 million project would be similar to the 18-bed chronic care unit which was approved for the hospital in 1986 but shelved in March 1989 by then minister of health Elinor Caplan.

The resolution asks that the ministry's freeze on the expansion be lifted and government approval for construction be fast-tracked.

Financing for the expansion will come from a portion of the $2.3 million approved by the province for long-term care in Haliburton County and from the more than $600,000 raised by the community for the chronic care addition and which is being held in trust by the St. Joseph's Foundation.

Supporters of the resolution say the expansion is a project which can be undertaken immediately while a feasibility study is conducted on Minden Hospital and Hyland Crest senior citizens' home to tackle long-term care in Minden.

The expansion of the Haliburton Hospital will also allow the committee to access the $623,000 in community raised money without going back to the donors, according to the executive director of the foundation. (See story on page 4).

There was opposition to the motion by Minden members of the committee who feel no final decisions about bed allocation should be made until the feasibility study is complete.

Doug Campbell pointed out that at the previous meeting the committee defeated a resolution to split the number of beds evenly between Minden and Haliburton because a majority of members wanted to wait for the results of the study, and now those same members wanted to approve the expansion of the Haliburton Hospital without waiting for the study.

Minden Reeve Bern Berry, who also opposed the resolution to approve the expansion, said members who had wanted to include the entire county and avoid focussing on just Minden (more on page 4)

Tall tales and short stories

Six-year-old Casey Wubbenhorst enjoys the Dr. Suess classic Green Eggs and Ham as read by Mother Goose at the Minden Rotary Carnival last Wednesday. Mrs. Goose was presented by the Haliburton County Literacy Group. Casey, a resident of New Jersey, was visiting Minden with her family.

Two arrested after daytime burglary

Minden OPP arrested two men last Thursday in connection with a pair of daytime break-ins.

Shortly after 1 p.m., two men were seen leaving the scene of a break-in at a house in Lutterworth and police were notified.

Half-an-hour later, OPP Constable Rob Orlowski pulled over a vehicle matching the description on Bobcaygeon Road near the intersection of Parkside Crescent.

In the vehicle, officers found property stolen from the Lutterworth residence as well as property from another break-in at a Stanhope home earlier in the day.

Roy Robathan, 18, of Holland Landing near Newmarket, and John Arkwell, 40, of no fixed address, have been charged with two counts of break, enter and theft. Further charges are expected, pending the outcome of the investigation. The two men were transferred to the Lindsay Jail for a bail hearing last Friday.

Market value gets rough ride in Minden

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

If there were any doubts about the popularity of market value reassessment in Haliburton County, they were put to rest last weekend.

On Saturday, about 150 residents from the west side of the county, many of them wearing buttons stating their opposition to MVA, gathered at the Minden Community Centre for the first of three public meetings on the reassessment issue.

Regional assessment officer Ron Young presented the same tax impact study as has already been presented to county council and each of the 10 municipal councils, after which the floor was open to questions and statements from the audience.

Young delivered the same message to the public as he has to local politicians - if adopted, full MVA would benefit businesses, farms and roughly half of the county's residential tax payers and would hurt the other half of residential property owners, most of whom own lakefront property.

The response from the audience, mostly lakefront property owners, was equally clear - "No, not at this time." (Actually at one point in the meeting several people did stand up, at the urging of one resident, to chant that slogan in unison and make their position clear to the municipal councillors in the room.)

Reeve Bern Berry chaired the meeting and reminded everyone that Young is just the messenger presenting the study county council asked for in 1987, and he promised to "shield" the assessment official from hostile audience reaction.

All five members of Minden council attended the meeting, as did Lutterworth Reeve Cam Ecclestone and Cheryl Murdoch, Lutterworth's board of education trustee.

"I don't know where the other politicians are," said Berry. "They knew about this meeting."

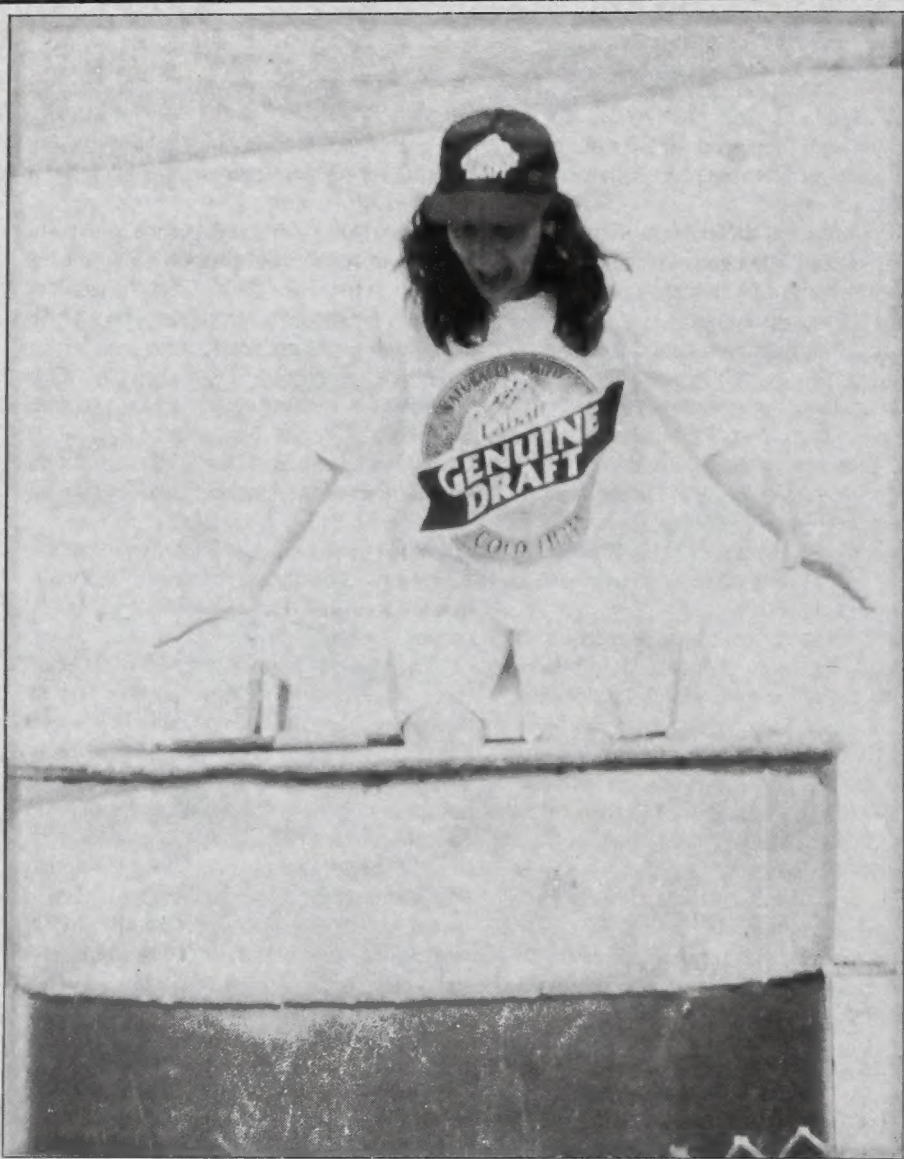

Young, who was presenting the impact study for the 13th time since May, started by addressing some of the misconceptions he says have surfaced during discussions of market value reassessment.

Many opponents of reassessment have said the county should wait for the report from the province's Fair Tax Commission, which is currently studying many tax-related issues in Ontario.

"The Fair Tax Commission has no authority to change anything," said Young. "They are a group of people brought together to gather ideas." Those ideas will then be submitted to the government, which will consider changes in legislation.

Two of the ideas discussed by the commission which have been hailed as more fair (more on page 3)

Smash-up derby on Main St. leaves five cars damaged

An impromptu smash up derby in downtown Minden has resulted in damage to five vehicles and a Hamilton man being charged with several offenses.

On Saturday, July 25, a white Chevy Camaro was heading north on Main Street when the car swerved wildly, striking a number of vehicles which were parked along the curb.

The Camaro struck the left front corner of a Jeep before ploughing into the back of a Volkswagen.

The Volkswagen was rammed into the Honda parked in front of it, which in turn struck a Sunbird.

Minden OPP were able to trace the car from a licensed plate which was left behind following the collision.

The car was found at 8 a.m. the following day on Highway 121 outside Minden.

Pedro Silveira, 18, of Hamilton has been charged with dangerous driving, failing to remain and having no insurance.

Two more MVA public meetings

Last Saturday's public meeting on the proposed reassessment of Haliburton County to 1988 market values, was the first of three such presentations.

The next meeting is being held this Saturday, August 8, at the Bicroft Community Centre at 10 a.m.

The third and final meeting is at the Dysart Community Centre on August 15, also starting at 10 a.m.

Residents reject reassessment

alternatives to the current property tax assessment system are site value assessment and two tier assessment.

With site value assessment, only land would be taxed not the buildings.

That means owners of high priced lakeshore property would pay an even higher share of the tax burden than they would with full MVA.

The two-tier system could tax land and buildings at different rates. Although the process would start with equal amounts of money being generated from land as from buildings, Young said the eventual goal would be to collect two-thirds of taxes from land and one-third from buildings.

The result would be the same - a large portion of taxes to be borne by owners of valuable property, like lakeshore.

"The effect on you would be horrendous," he told the audience. He said people should know exactly what they are supporting, "or you might get the politicians to vote for it."

Young also stressed that market value reassessment is not part of some plot by the provincial government to grab more taxes or reduce grant payments to the municipalities involved.

Letters have been sent from the ministries of education and municipal affairs stating that reassessment to 1988 market values will have no affect on the amount of money received by Haliburton County in grants.

"There is no conspiracy, folks," he said.

Haliburton County is the third region to which Young has presented reassessment studies.

Victoria County rejected MVA because "they don't want the farming community to see tax relief." Peterborough County deferred a decision because they want the City of Peterborough removed from the proposed reassessment.

Young said his office will also guard against any possible tax grab which municipal councils may attempt in the switch to full market value reassessment.

"To make sure municipalities don't find a windfall, we'll make public what the mill rate should be so any increase in taxation is related to an increase in property value or because the politicians increased their budget."

In Haliburton County, 92 per cent of property is residential but that class pays only 86 per cent of the tax burden. If MVA is adopted, their share of property taxes would increase to 92 per cent.

In total, almost $1 million in property taxes would be shifted from commercial, industrial and farm properties to residential properties, and the brunt of that shift would be borne by the slightly more than 50 per cent of property owners who would experience a tax increase.

As has been the case throughout the information sessions, many of the criticisms from the audience focussed on property taxes in general and not the assessment method of using fair market value.

Young agreed that property taxes do not relate to the land owners' ability to pay or the amount of services provided to property being taxed.

Unlike other taxes however, Young said the property tax is flexible and very easy to administer and collect. At a time when revenue from income tax and sales taxes are declining, Young said the property tax provides a constant source of government revenue which people can not avoid paying.

On the question of lobby efforts by people who will benefit from MVA, both Young and Berry provided a simple answer - there hasn't been any.

Neither the reeve nor the assessment office has been contacted by businesses owners pressing for reassessment and the tax relief it will produce.

Young said a shift in tax burden from commercial to residential properties is not the foundation for reassessment, but the result of commercial property taxes being kept artificially high for many years.

When asked why Haliburton County is considered a wealthy county by the province for the purposes of determining education grants, Young explained that it's because of the low number of students compared to the assessment base.

While there are about 20,000 residences in the county, about three quarters of the population are seasonal residents who don't use the school system.

The student population of 2,000 means there is only one student from every 10 residents. Compared to urban areas where there is one student from every two or three household, Young says Haliburton County has a larger assessment base from which to finance the education of a small number of students.

Minden village resident Doug Campbell, who's among the 47 per cent of residents who would experience a tax decrease after MVA, was the one speaker at the meeting who did not stand up to oppose reassessment.

He said the taxes on his property, including water and sewer, amount to about six dollars day of which $1.76 goes to the municipality; $0.51 goes to the county and $2.73 goes to the board of education.

As someone without children in the school system, Campbell said he sympathizes with seasonal residents' complaints about being taxed for a service they can't use, but said attacking MVA is the wrong response.

"Hitting at the assessment system is not the way to get change," he said. He encouraged people to write the Fair Tax Commission to push for reforms in the education tax system.

Most don't know effect of MVA on their own property tax bill

Despite all the hype and hyperbole generated by the discussion of full market value reassessment, only a handful of property owners know the effect MVA will have on their taxes.

There are 20,000 households in Haliburton County and, as of last Friday, only 162 people have written to the assessment office to find out what would happen to their property taxes if MVA is adopted. Another dozen have dropped by the Lindsay office in person, bringing the total to about 175.

Regional assessment officer Ron Young, who has been encouraging people to write to him, says he only receives about four requests a day although he does receive up to 40 requests after his address is published in the local press.

Even organizers of the anti-MVA lobby admit they are disappointed in the lack of response from residents on this issue.

Young says he has had numerous phone calls from people but he won't give the information over the phone because he has no way of verifying the identity of the caller.

People who write to the assessment office, or drop by in person, can find out the 1988 value of their properties and the amount of property tax they would have paid in 1991 if MVA had been in effect.

By comparing the amount of tax actually paid in 1991 to the amount of tax which would have been paid after MVA, residents can determine whether their share of the tax burden will increase or decrease, and by how much. Young illustrates the risk residents take by assuming they know the effect of MVA on their taxes. A seasonal resident from Sherborne who contacted the office to register her complaint against the proposed reassessment was unaware that her property tax would actually decrease if MVA was adopted.

Although a majority of lakeshore property owners will experience tax increases, Young says that is not automatically the case.

Of all residential property owners about half will see increases and about half will see decreases.

Residents can request the information by providing their name and either their lot and concession number, or the roll number from their municipal tax bill. At present the low volume of requests means letters are being answered the same day they are received.

Proposal similar to chronic care plans and Haliburton, "have turned around and are now just interested in Haliburton Village."

But Dysart Reeve Chris Hodgson said the expansion of the Haliburton Hospital is just the first step in meeting the long-term care needs of Haliburton County.

"We need the public behind us," he said. "This is just step one. We have to start somewhere and the study will take over a year."

Michael Collins, who suggested the committee approve the Haliburton Hospital expansion, said there will still be money left to finance long-term care beds in Minden.

The government will fund two-thirds of the cost of capital projects up to the maximum approved funding of $2.3 million. Because the committee decided that half of the government money should be used for the Haliburton expansion, the $623,000 in the trust fund would be matched by $1.15 million from the province for a total of $1.77 million, enough for the construction of between 15 and 18 beds, depending on the actual costs.

If beds are approved for Minden, following the feasibility study on Hyland Crest and Minden Hospital, the committee could then use the $266,000 which county council raised for the 18-bed chronic care unit and would have to undertake a fundraising campaign to finance the rest of the community's one-third share.

The committee decided to separate the Haliburton Hospital project from the feasibility study on the Minden Hospital and Hyland Crest.

Because studies were conducted on the Haliburton Hospital when the original chronic care facility was being proposed, it has been decided to update these studies rather than starting over.

Hodgson assured the other members of the committee that there is sufficient sewage capacity to handle the long-term care addition.

The committee has asked St. Joseph's for copies of the studies involving the 18-bed chronic care addition to Haliburton Hospital. A resolution was passed directing Frank Lussing, executive director of St. Joseph's, to bring copies of the studies with him to a meeting last Friday with local representatives.

The decision about going ahead with the Haliburton Hospital long-term care addition will depend on the outcome of updating these studies.

Committee Chairman Jack Brezina warned the members not to get their hopes up that a decision on the beds will lead to prompt approval by the province.

"As optimistic as the resolution is, we're all aware how slowly things move through the system," he said. "We've taken one step forward, but I don't think we can expect to see shovels in the ground tomorrow."

Community funds available

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

The more than $600,000 of money raised by local residents for the 18-bed chronic care addition to Haliburton Hospital can be used for to pay for the placement of long-term beds at that facility.

If there are plans to use that money for any other purpose, the donors must be contacted and their approval for the new use sought, according to the executive director of the foundation which is holding the money in trust.

John MacDonald, from the St. Joseph's Foundation, met with members of the Haliburton County Planning and Development Committee last Tuesday to clarify the status of the money.

The Haliburton Hospital expansion fund was established to cover the community's portion of the 18-bed facility. In a relatively short period of time, the community raised the approximately $400,000 required.

However in March 1989 the Liberal government put the expansion on hold and the money was never spent. In the Foundation's care, the fund has grown to $623,000.

The development and planning committee, which is implementing improvements to the county's health, housing and social services, asked to meet MacDonald to find out under what circumstances the money might be used.

The committee is currently dealing with the placement of 30 long-term care (more on page 5)

Money from fund can't be returned

beds which have been approved for the county by the province. There is $2.3 million in provincial funding available, but the county has to cover one-third of the costs.

MacDonald said there are both ethical and legal considerations in releasing the money.

"From an ethical standpoint, we have to honour the donors' wishes," he said. "If there is a deviation, we should go back to the donors in some fashion."

Because the money was raised through a public fundraising effort and involved thousands of individual donations, MacDonald said the task of contacting people for approval to change the use of the money would be "onerous".

And from a legal standpoint, MacDonald said the Foundation can not return the money to the people who donated it, without running the risk of losing its charitable designation.

Government regulations require the Foundation to spend at least 80 per cent of its money on charitable causes, leaving 20 per cent to cover administration.

Returning the money raised for the hospital expansion fund would jeopardize the Foundation's ability to meet that requirement since payment of refunds is not a charitable cause.

MacDonald also raised the possibility of some of the money being used to cover costs which were incurred by the 18-bed chronic care unit before the government freeze.

Architectural fees and other expenses amounted to $379,000, of which the government covered $253,000.

The remaining $126,000, which was supposed to be covered by community money, was paid by St. Joseph's Hospital out of its operating budget.

MacDonald said St. Joseph's could still demand repayment out of the expansion fund and the Foundation would have no reason to deny the request.

Minden Reeve Bern Berry objected to the expansion fund being used to cover the costs.

He said much of $379,000 resulted from government demands and should be paid for by the government.

Alan Cavell, a civil servant with the provincial long-term care division, hinted that the government might be flexible in covering the costs incurred by St. Joseph's.

The committee also heard from a number of people who were involved in the original fundraising campaign for the Haliburton Hospital expansion project, and they expressed surprise at MacDonald's claim the money can't be refunded.

Former Reeve Harry Davis also expressed his frustration at the delay in getting the expansion built.

"We've dragged this on and nothing has been done except the announcement we're going to have a new study," he said.

"You don't realize the feelings attached to this. If you think you can go back to people and say you need more money, you're wrong."

At the meeting the committee decided to ask the government to lift the freeze on the hospital expansion and proceed with construction of a long-term care facility at the hospital containing approximately 15 beds.

MacDonald said such a project would be close enough to the original intention of the 18-bed chronic care unit, that the $623,000 could be used without a problem.

Look before leaping

The aggressive and often hostile campaign against the proposed county-wide reassessment to full market value is understandable, given the economic threat it presents.

That is why it is so surprising, given the potential for tax increases, that so few people have taken the time to find out what effect MVA will have on their taxes.

Except for the 175 people who now know exactly where they stand on the issue, all other critics have responded like Chicken Little, yelling about the sky falling without looking up.

The danger in this sort of behaviour is illustrated by one Sherborne cottager who was firmly on the side of the anti-MVA forces until she found out that her taxes would actually decrease as a result of reassessment.

While this case is surely the exception rather than the rule, there is no excuse for not being informed.

For the price of a stamp, an envelope and a piece of paper, and 10 minutes of your time, you can see what monetary effect reassessment will have.

If the county is going to reject reassessment, and by now it has become fairly obvious that will be the case, at least we should know exactly what it is we are rejecting, and why.

And we should also realize that the attack on MVA has less to do with reassessment than with concerns about the property tax system itself.

Reassessment or no reassessment, seasonal residents will still pay education taxes here as well as in the city, the amount on tax bills will still have nothing to do with ability to pay or services received.

If MVA isn't appealing, the status quo is also far from perfect.

At the very least MVA would address the fact that there are property owners in the county who are currently paying more than their share of local costs, compared to people who own property of similar value.

Aren't they entitled to a fair and equitable tax system?

The addresses for the regional assessment office in Lindsay, and the Fair Tax Commission in Toronto are published on page three of this newspaper - use them.

If you want to get involved, at least be informed.

At 96, Burns is comedy's eternal man

The great — and definitely not yet late — George Burns played Toronto recently. Standing in front of rooms packed full of people and making them laugh is something George Burns has been doing for oh, only the past eight decades or so.

The man is 96 years old but he still has the Gillette-edge timing, the masterful deadpan and the breathtaking quips he used to massage Vaudeville audiences back when our grandparents were young and you and I weren't even thought of, Maggie.

Time has taken a few swipes at George. He's no longer the strapping, slightly roguish wag he was when he and Gracie Allen did their shtick together. Nowadays he looks like an affable garden gnome — sort of a Ross Perot with a sense of humour. On the stage he moves his body carefully, stiffly, like the brittle antique it is. But ah, when he opens his mouth the ineffable magic of a supremely funny mind comes forth. At 96, George Burns is still firing on all cylinders.

How can this be? How can one man retain so much of his faculties into his tenth decade when so many of us will have collapsed into mumbling, cantankerous old flesh pods at least a quarter of a century before — and if — we reach that mark?

If I knew the answer to that question I wouldn't be sitting here slouched over a word processor pecking out a column. I'd be doing one-and-a-half gainers into a swimming pool full of the money I made from peddling Black's Fail Safe Fountain of Youth Elixir and Anti-Senility Pills.

I do know that George Burns isn't the only mortal who's managed to duke out a split decision with Old Man Time.

Back in 1546, the Vatican looked around for the best architect in the world to plan and construct St. Peter's Basilica in Rome. They settled on a chap named Michelangelo di Lodovico Buonarroti Simoni. When he landed the commission, Michelangelo was 71 years old. Off to the east of us there's a wizened little guy at the helm of the most populous empire this planet has ever known. His name is Deng Xiaoping. We don't see much of him, (more on page 7)

A long-term answer

Last week's decision by the Haliburton County Planning and Development Committee to pursue a long-term care addition for the Haliburton Hospital will be greeted with some skepticism.

Supporters of the original 18-bed chronic care addition, which this most recent plan would closely resemble, are understandably saving their cheers and celebrations for the sod turning, or more likely the official opening.

After many years of playing bureaucratic tag with health ministry officials in Queen's Park and having the project yanked out from under them after the money had been raised and blueprints drawn, any new announcements will be taken with a grain of salt.

And there are other people who will see the decision in terms of that dreaded Minden-Haliburton rivalry, the existence of which is also a subject for debate.

Two weeks ago, the committee defeated a resolution which would have split the number of long-term beds available to the county evenly between the two villages.

In defeating the motion, opponents stressed the need to wait for the results of the feasibility study on Hyland Crest and the Minden Hospital before making any decisions and were reluctant to isolate the two villages and cut off the rest of the county, which is also under-served.

Then, just seven days later, the same people who defeated the original motion voted in favour of going ahead with the Haliburton expansion, using half of the government money to build half the available beds. In essence, the same resolution without Minden's half of the equation.

But, in spite of what ever political considerations might have had a hand in the decision, proceeding with the Haliburton Hospital expansion is probably just what the county needs.

First, it will allow the committee to emerge from the shadow of the 18-bed controversy and get on with the important task of developing Haliburton County's long-term health, housing and social service needs.

Since 1989, every decision about long-term care has been coloured by the emotional connection people have developed with the chronic care facility. With that highly-charged issue put to rest, other considerations which are less prominent but no less important can now receive the attention they deserve.

Analysis

by Jay Kerr-Wilson, editor

Second, the decision by the committee seems to be the only one which solves the problem of how to approach the more than $600,000 of community-raised money being held in trust by St. Joseph's.

In terms of whether the proposed expansion is in the best interests of the county, it would seem to be a sound beginning.

The county has been approved for 30 long-term beds, and its hard to imagine how 15 of those beds in Haliburton village could not be put to good use, when there are at least 30 people in the county in need of immediate institutional care. Study or no study, presumably some of the beds would have wound up in Haliburton anyway.

That still leaves up to 15 beds, plus half of the government's $2.3 million, plus more than $200,000 in county money to upgrade facilities in Minden.

While some additional fundraising will be necessary, the community will have to come up with more money to finance all 30 beds, no matter where they are placed. And people are more likely to embrace a fundraising campaign to finance long-term care if they can see the results of the first campaign.

There is still the question of provincial approval for the expansion, and whether or not it will be "fast-tracked" as the committee asked, but there is every indication the government is as eager as the county to put this issue behind it.

During the election, NDP leader Bob Rae promised on two occasions that, if elected, his government would build the chronic care addition to Haliburton Hospital.

Aware of what the chronic care issue did to Liberal fortunes in the county, the NDP is eager not to be the next government to renege on the issue.

And while Drainville and Rae won't be able to take credit if the long-term addition goes ahead, at least they won't have it hanging over their heads during the next election, so it's a good bet ministry officials will be strongly encouraged to approve the committee's request, which was made as part of a ministry sanctioned process.

We need the beds, and if there is any way to build at least some of those beds quickly which will also finally lay to rest the chronic care issue, we should accept the option.

Another resident says no to market reassessment

The following is a copy sent to Minden council regarding market value reassessment.
Dear Sirs:

As members of the Mountain Lake Property Owners Association we are writing in order to express some of our concerns about the proposed Market Value Reassessment in the county of Haliburton.

We are aware that the largest expenses of the council are directed toward the education in the primary and secondary schools in this county. It is of prime importance to Haliburton, and indeed to Ontario, that the potential inherent in our children must be realized to the fullest, whether they happen to live in Toronto or in the less affluent regions. It is the responsibility of the Ministry of Education of this province to see that potential is achieved for all Ontario children. And, with that responsibility must go the lion's share of the funding for the achievement of that objective. To attempt to fund this vital objective largely through local taxation based on property assessments, which may vary greatly from township to township and from year to year, depending on the whims of the economy, is patently ridiculous.

The current provincial government must be made fully aware of this obligation to the children of this province. We are relying on you, the council of the townships of Anson, Hindon and Minden, to reject the attempted manipulations inherent in the MVA proposal, and to inform the Bob Rae government of your good and valid reasons for doing so.

Yours very truly,
Douglas and Eve Thompson.

Something called dry

The following article first appeared in The Times more than 10 years ago. One of our readers suggested we run it again, given this summer's dismal weather.

Haliburton County residents were startled Saturday when patches of blue appeared overhead. A number of old-timers were called upon to reassure the younger generation that the world had not come to an end, but that merely the cloud cover which had blanketed this area for close to two months was finally starting to break.

Further reassurance was needed from the more experienced members of the community a short time later when a large glowing orb appeared in the sky. Residents reported feeling a warm tingling sensation on their skins as a result of the mysterious circular form. The sudden reappearance of what is believed to be shadows, created havoc among livestock and family pets.

"The blue space is the sky," one longtime resident of the county told the worried crowd that gathered on Minden's main street. He had to consult with a number of his older friends, however, before they agreed that the golden orb was indeed the sun.

When the youngsters started getting used to the bright conditions and partially clear skies, a new worry swept over the populace as streets and sidewalks started to change colour.

"The houses are dying, the houses are dying," the children were heard to yell, "They've stopped dripping."

Sure enough, even the leaves had ceased shedding excess moisture. "It is a phenomenon associated with the sun and clear skies," the old-timer noted. "It is called dry."

While many found the words of the veteran reassuring, they still seemed apprehensive about the changes taking place. One small child was heard to remark, "I wish everything would return to normal and start dripping again."

Secret of long life is being too busy to die

but last I heard, he was closing in on 90, still chain-smoking cigarettes and dispensing edicts.

Back in 1936, a 76-year-old woman named Anna Mary Robinson decided that arthritis had stiffened her fingers too much to do any more of her needlework. So she put down her needles and threads and picked up a paintbrush, promptly launching a 25-year career as an artist known around the world as Grandma Moses.

In 1953, when Buckingham Palace poobahs needed music for the coronation of Queen Elizabeth, they settled on Ralph Vaughan Williams. He was 81 years old at the time.

Winston Churchill, Alexander Graham Bell, Pablo Picasso — all enjoyed some of their greatest personal triumphs long after they were eligible for their senior citizens pension cheques. And who can forget one of Canada's greatest geriatricists — Henry "Jackrabbit" Johannsen — who was still strapping on his cross-country slats and telemarking rings around young skiers when he was well past the century mark.

Maybe the secret to eternal youth is a simple human attribute — attitude. Jackrabbit kept skiing because he couldn't imagine not skiing. Picasso kept his brushes moist because he still had things to paint. Churchill kept politicking and writing because he was too busy to look at the calendar. Perhaps that's what binds all ageless overachievers together — they're too busy living to bother their heads about dying.

Attitude. Or as George Burns replied when a reporter asked him about death: "How can I die? I'm booked."

Twelve Mile/Little Boshkung annual meeting

Councillors' approach to recycling differs

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

At the July 25 annual meeting of the Twelve Mile/Little Boshkung Property Owners Association members tackled waste management, shoreline closures and energy efficiency.

Berry and Anthon exchange opinions

The meeting, which was held at the Zion United Church in Carnarvon, included a discussion between association members, Minden Reeve Bern Berry and Councillor Jeanne Anthon.

Berry began his comments by thanking the association members for the role played by lake associations in his victory over three competitors in last November's municipal election.

"I thank you for your support if you gave it to me," he said. "If not, I hope I can prove myself worthy of your support next time around, if that's something I've decided to pursue."

Berry also delivered the same message he's relayed to other lake associations - the important role seasonal residents can play in helping to ease Haliburton County's devastated economy.

"We're in trouble," he said. "We have over 30 per cent unemployment and a very large welfare roll. I welcome you back, and I welcome you to use local stores and services."

Although council kept the budget increase down, Berry said there is a large amount of uncollected taxes and businesses have closed due to the recession.

Anthon also expressed her appreciation for the support of the association during the election and said she's always available to listen to residents.

"I'm surprised most of my calls are not from cottagers," she said. "It's critical you stay in touch. There is a lot going on and we have to know how you feel."

Anthon said council is trying to open the lines of communication and she has contacted the executives of lake associations to let them know about severances or other issues affecting their lakes.

She encouraged associations to start planning committees to stay on top of land use issues.

While lake associations in Anson, Hindon and Minden have celebrated the election of Anthon and Grant Plooard - the two candidates sponsored by the Coalition of Anson, Hindon and Minden Ratepayers Associations (CAHMRA) - Berry reminded the members there are three other people on council; himself, Deputy-Reeve Lewis Stevens and Jerry Rome.

Berry alluded to the fact that the personally conflicts which often disrupted the previous council are a problem this term.

"I feel we have a very good council," he said. "We have disagreements, but we smile and get on with things. That's the difference and that's why we're not getting the bad press."

During a discussion on the environment, Berry and Anthon demonstrated how members of council can disagree on an issue and still get along.

Berry said while he thinks recycling is a great thing, he does not recycle at home because there are no markets for recycled goods.

When the municipality began its recycling program at the Scotch Line landfill site, Berry said the township had to rent the container and pay haulage fees but also received money for the recycled material so the program almost paid for itself.

Lutterworth rich with history

New book will explore area's heritage

by Andy Holloway

History books are a lot like memories; regular people and their average everyday lives get lost in the shuffle to remember only the best and the worst of the past.

However, a new upcoming book, Whispering Pines, a Haliburton Heritage, is devoted almost entirely to the way average people used to live in the Haliburton area. Lutterworth resident John Hulbig has collected stories from his own family and those from other long time area residents to create a view of the way people used to live dating back to the mid-19th century.

Hulbig, whose German grandfather settled around Deep Bay in the 1870s, says he has always been interested in history and literature. He proudly shows a slightly worn book he won for excellence in his history class when he was a 12-year-old boy. Hulbig says his schooling was not much, but a love for history and stories had been sharpened by the experience. His mother also used to tell him stories and always brought home three books from the Minden library every week.

Adding to his curiosity was a collection of old bills from Minden businesses and Lutterworth township that he found in his father's house. He found the bills, which dated from around the turn of the century, when he was very young, but he remembered where they were and later on they provided a basis for Hulbig's research.

Around 1978, Hulbig joined the ambulance service and he says he had a lot of time on his hands while waiting on call. To relieve the boredom, he began writing down some of the stories his family used to tell.

"There was a lot of waiting around while on call, you know we had to be ready and in uniform at all times and so I thought I'd like to write down some of the stories, at the very least for my son to read, that I'd been told as a boy," says Hulbig.

The original manuscript was hand written and filled with pictures and old bills and receipts. One of the pieces is a tax bill from Lutterworth asking for about $11. Just like today, the public school tax accounted for a hefty portion of the tax bill. However, much of the bills were left out of newer versions of the manuscript because Hulbig's editor, Margaret Berry, the daughter-in-law of one of his neighbors, said they did not fit in with the stories that Hulbig was telling.

Hulbig gives credit to Berry for finding for finding a publisher and rearranging his stories into book form on her own spare time. Fourteen years after starting his book, Hulbig is finally on the verge of seeing his book released.

The book is filled with stories from the mid 1800s through to the depression of the 1930s. One of the themes that keeps recurring says Hulbig is how much nicer and simpler it was to live back then.

"Everybody was nice to each other, like one big family. If you were going by and someone's cows needed to be put out or the cows were in the yard you would go and help. You never had to lock your days in those days. It was a great way to live."

One chapter is devoted entirely to the Great Depression. Hulbig says the Haliburton area was not affected too badly by the depression because most of the people grew their own food, could cut down trees for heat and there were plenty of deer and moose to hunt. People could also make some money from trapping even though the price of fur was dropping.

Hulbig says men from the cities were brought up here to work in the road camps which stretched from Norland to Dorset. Much of the roads that exist today in the area were first built during this period. Hulbig remembers his class at the old schoolhouse, that still stands next to his house on Highway 121, being taken out just in case any debris from the workers blasting the rock came flying through the roof.

Another chapter is about the moonshining business which thrived in the Haliburton area. However, this was one chapter Hulbig had to rely on other people for information (more on page 11)

Doing that funky thing with art

By Andy Holloway

Teenagers making and breaking funky stuff may sound like a nightmare to some parents, but Bill Fraser and his students thrive on such activity.

Fraser is an instructor at the Haliburton School of Fine Arts and his students say his classes are the "coolest." Last week, he taught a course called "Twens Making Funky Stuff" for young teenagers.

In class, Fraser, who is from Brooklin, Ontario, shows teenagers how to use manual and power tools, shows them the basics of creating sculptures and then lets them loose. On Thursday, the students created the storyline and actual moving characters for a play, loosely based on the old fairy tale "Three Billy Goats Gruff." While the play had some technical difficulties, there was no question every student had a fun time.

"Bill always keeps his classes fun," says Cora Sheppard, a 13-year-old from Burlington, Ontario. "Art at school is more of a visual thing, here we get to create things."

Students calling their teachers by their first name may be some what of a shocker for people raised a little more strictly, but then school was never this fun.

"Art at school is repetitious," says 13-year-old Stuart Paul from Millbrook, Ontario. "This was our chance to make a play all by ourselves."

Cora agrees and says Fraser acts as more of a technical advisor and the students come up with the ideas. Cora, Stuart and Graham Lindfield, 12, of Ottawa co-wrote the script for the class production (more on page 12)

A troll prepares to get blasted into oblivion by three billy goat gruffs, one of whom talks like the Terminator, in a play put on by some art students last Thursday. The troll was created entirely by the hands of several young teenagers at the Haliburton School of Fine Arts. The students were part of Bill Fraser's class called "Twens Making Funky Stuff."

Treasure tales told

tion.

"My parents were teetotalers, but I always wanted to know how to make moonshine. All around us there were quite a lot of people who got a name from themselves from making moonshine. I always wanted to know how it worked, but I never really found out - it was all very hush hush," says Hulbig.

The history of Lutterworth even includes, as all great history books do, a couple of missing treasure stories. One of the stories Hulbig has was set in the 1850s, the native Indians were trading pieces of silver with the fur trappers. However, the Indians kept the location of their silver vein a secret so no one else could find it. Finally, the last person to know of its place died and no one has found it since.

"The vein is somewhere around Miner's Bay," says Hulbig. "It's in between three lakes where the water goes under the rocks. That's not much of a description, but that's where it's supposed to be."

As much as the book is a learning experience for its readers, Hulbig says he learned a lot researching for the book.

"This type of history is very interesting to me and I know all of the people, but I learn new things about them all the time."

The final version of the book is set to be released in September, but Hulbig will be showing his manuscripts at the Minden Museum on Tuesday, August 11.

with a little help from classic children's stories, Shakespeare and The Terminator. Imagine a goat saying "Hasta la vista, Baby" before blowing up the troll who lives under the bridge so the three billy goat gruffs can eat at McDonalds and you get the idea of the play.

The goats and the troll were made from wood, string and other materials found in the woods surrounding the school.

It sounds silly, but Fraser says that is actually the point. He says traditional schools do not have the time, materials or space to create fun art classes.

"Teachers really have an uphill battle to make classes fun. I have so much freedom with the students that it's much easier for me," says Fraser.

Or as Graham says about regular art school, "Boy is this ever boring."

While his students say Fraser makes art classes fun, Fraser says young teenagers are the perfect group to work with.

"Their maturity level is high enough to work with tools, but they still have the creative inspiration of their childhood," says

Fraser.

Cora and Stuart also attended a class Fraser taught last year called Video Hijinks where students created mini-movies. However, Stuart says the class was harder this year because there was more complicated building and they also had to collect the materials. All three students say they would take another course with Fraser and even try to persuade their way into his class for this week, a wood sculpting class for children between the ages of five and ten.

"All right you can come," says Fraser, "As long as you wear shoes on your knees."

Not that it is all fun and games. Fraser says he hopes his students come away from his classes with knowledge that will help them in the future.

"I hope they will get a creative approach to problem solving and that the experiences they get will overflow into other aspects of their lives. Hopefully they will interact with others their own age with enthusiasm as well."

Cora says she has learned to laugh and smile more often. Stuart says he has learned that mistakes may be bad, but you can learn from them and have fun.

"I have learned more in one week than I would have in a week at regular school," says Stuart.

"A month of regular school," corrects Graham.

The Heineken Yard Foot Race featured some hot action despite the unseasonably cool weather.

Hot Heineken hoofers

The 21st annual Heineken Yard Foot Race's success last Friday despite some poor weather left race organizers surprised, but happy.

Over 550 runners registered for the 7.4 kilometer race and about 450 made it to the finish line which according to race organizer, Ian Sainsbury is "as good as any other year."

"I was just stunned. I thought it might be a bit of a disaster," says Sainsbury.

Sainsbury says this year's race was one of the best all round races ever run. The runners were in top shape and several finished within a minute of the leader. Many of the runners complained about the extra weight the rain added to their clothes, but at least it was not as hot as last year.

Alan Coneybeare and Gord Monk were piped into the Rockcliffe Hotel by piper Sid Cooper to receive their Community Salute awards for outstanding service to the community and for helping out in past races.

Proceeds from the race will go to the Amici Camping Charity. Race results will be published next week.

Hustlers ninth win puts solid hold on second

The Minden Rockcliffe Hustlers won their third game in a row when they beat Bobcaygeon 3-2 last Tuesday.

The Hustlers win, combined with Lindsay's loss to Fenelon Falls on Wednesday, assures the team of finishing no worse than third in the Tri-County Fastball League. Bobcaygeon, which has now lost five in a row only has one game remaining and will finish in fourth spot.

The Hustlers still have two games left to play, both against Lindsay, while Lindsay has three left. If Lindsay wins all three then the Hustlers and Lindsay will finish tied for second spot. With the post-season just one week away, there is still no play-off formula. Russ Baptiste, the leagues convenor says a meeting will be held this week to determine whether a tournament format or an elimination round will be used to determine the final champion.

The standings as of August 1:

	W	L	PCT
Fenelon Falls	12	6	.667
Minden	9	7	.563
Lindsay	6	9	.400
Bobcaygeon	6	10	.375

Hole-in-one

Jim Church nailed a hole-in-one at Blairhampton Golf Course last week.

Church aced the par three, 173 yard eighth hole with a 5-wood. It was witnessed by Glen Scully, Al Borondy and Tom Pippen. Congratulations Jim.

Minor ball wraps up

The sun shone with unusual brightness when the boys and girls of summer wound up their baseball season with a day of exciting ball on Sunday, July 25.

Hundreds of players, spectators and officials crowded the Minden Ball Diamonds to participate in the annual day-long minor baseball tournament.

All six divisions of the Minden Minor Baseball League (MMBL), from the Junior T-ballers to the peewees, were in action competing for their respective titles.

The non-stop action was fierce, but sporting. Even between games, many of the youngsters were running around playing football, catch and the occasional game of "Ma, can I have a hot dog?"

There was also a fair share of high drama, particularly in the Peewee division. Dennis B. Willison Construction, who had not won a game all year won, their semi-final game to make it to the championship game against Minden Store Room. At one point during the final game Willison Construction was comfortably ahead, but ending up losing when the Store Room scored two in its half of the sixth inning to pull ahead. The Store Room prevailed 13-12.

During one break in the action, Ryan White (Shaw) was honoured for selling the most raffle tickets by Kim Colliss, vice-president of the MMBL. White managed to sell 51 books and won $100 for his efforts.

With the traditional summer sport now over for most of the competitors, can pulling out the old hockey equipment be far behind? Tournament results are as follows:

Stanhope against MVA says Gardner to cottagers

by Susan Wilson

Camp Kawabi on Big Hawk Lake was once again the site of the annual meeting of the Hawk/Hall's Lakes Property Owners' Association, held on Sunday, July 26. The threat of inclement weather drove the meeting, usually held outdoors under the trees, into the dining hall. As always, the benches were packed.

The meeting, led by president Bill Jamieson, covered the usual range of topics. In his opening remarks, Jamieson noted that the association was formed 40 years ago and that water levels were noted then as a priority. "Nothing has changed," he remarked, to a ripple of knowing laughter.

Jamieson reported that he had attended the spring meeting of the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations (FOCA), at which John Sewell, former mayor of Toronto who is heading up the land-use commission, was a guest speaker. Sewell spoke of the need for protection of woodlots and wetlands, and the proposal that all monitoring of sewage treatment, including septic systems, become a municipal responsibility.

Jamieson, along with Fred Gardner, Reeve of Stanhope Township and a long-standing member of the association, attended a public forum in Lindsay on the Trent-Severn Waterway management plan. He was disappointed that they were the only two people there representing the reservoir lakes.

Gardner was the guest speaker at the Hawk/Hall's meeting. He touched on many issues during his talk: municipal budgets, market value assessment, garbage, speed limit signs on waterways, and water levels.

Municipal Budgets

Gardner felt that councillors at both the county and township levels had held the line on taxes quite successfully. The county budget for the coming year has gone up 3.5 per cent, in spite of a 30 per cent increase in social services. "We had to defer the Official Plan and the Waste Management Master Plan to do it," he said. "However, we decided to keep the roads budget up because this filters through to the private sector." (He noted that the unemployment rate in the county was over 30 per cent last winter.)

As far as Stanhope is concerned, the township's budget has gone up 3.75 per cent (6.7 per cent if education is included). "The biggest item," he said, "is the cost of replacing the bridge near St. Peter's Church. We hope to pay off at least half of the cost this year and the other half next year. Without the bridge, our budget would have gone down nine per cent."

Gardner said that the next major capital item coming up in the future is replacement of the fire-fighting vehicles; three of the four date from the 1970s. He expects that, in another year, they will be able to pay for one pumper truck out of the reserve fund.

Overall, Stanhope gets 27 cents of every tax dollar, the county gets 12 cents, and the board of education gets 61 cents.

Market Value Assessment

Gardner reported that he and Eleanor Harrison voted, at county council, against re-opening the issue of market value assessment and that all the members of Stanhope council will continue to oppose it. He urged everyone to attend the public meetings in Minden on August 1 and in Haliburton on August 15.

"In the fall," he explained, "there will be another vote at county council on whether to approve market value assessment for the county. If it passes there, it comes back to each municipality for approval. If six of the ten municipalities pass it, then it's in for the whole county." Gardner said he doesn't feel the question will pass even the first vote at county council and that he will work hard to make sure it doesn't.

Garbage

A study has indicated that the Hawk Lake dump can be expanded, which means a new site won't be necessary. Since Ruth Grier, provincial Minister of the Environment, has decreed that there will be no burning at dumps, it means (more on page 17)

WHAT IS C.H.A.C.E.?

C.H.A.C.E. Inc. is a non-profit agency which strives to promote the well-being of our County's children. To this end, we operate two free Drop-In/Resource Centres, a Day Care Centre and a Private Home Day Care Network.

WHAT IS A RESOURCE CENTRE?

Resource Centres, or drop-ins, provide an opportunity for parents and caregivers and their children to play together in a safe and nurturing setting. Children ranging in age from birth to nine can take advantage of a wonderful selection of toys and activities. Parents and caregivers can join in the play and also have a chance to meet other parents and caregivers. C.H.A.C.E. Inc. operates two resource centres, one in Haliburton and the other in Minden.

WHAT DO DAY CARE AND PRIVATE HOME DAY CARE OFFER?

C.H.A.C.E. Day Care and Private Home Day Care (PHDC) offer quality, licensed child care. Our Day Care serves children aged 18 months to nine years, while each of our Private Homes can accommodate a maximum of five children from the age of six weeks to nine years. Both our Day Care and PHDC are licensed by the Ministry of Community and Social Services (MCSS). C.H.A.C.E. Day Care is located in Minden and we have Private Homes within the County of Haliburton. Financial assistance is available to families who qualify.

HOW DO I JOIN?

The Resource Centres are free for all families to use. Anyone is welcome. Families can also use our toy/book lending library, receive a copy of our quarterly newsletter and member discounts on workshops that are sponsored by C.H.A.C.E. Inc., for a small yearly membership. Infant equipment such as car seats and strollers can also be rented for a small fee.

Our Day Care and PHDC have set daily fees that are approved by the MCSS. Enrollment at our Day Care or PHDC entitles families to all membership privileges at our Resource Centres. More information about fees and enrollment can be obtained by contacting the C.H.A.C.E. Day Care Supervisor or the C.H.A.C.E. Executive Director.

STAFFING

Enthusiastic, qualified staff assist parents, caregivers and children with day to day activities and special events at both our Resource Centres.

Our Day Care always has as supervisory staff a qualified E.C.E. graduate as well as other energetic, caring Day Care Teachers.

C.H.A.C.E. Private Homes are made up of agency supported persons who possess the desire and skills to be caregivers.

FUNDING

C.H.A.C.E. Day Care and PHDC operate primarily on the fees we receive from our parents. Partial funding from the MCSS is available for special purchases.

C.H.A.C.E. Resource Centres' direct operating budgets are partially funded by the MCSS. Fund raising efforts also assist us with our costs.

Joint recycling venture a possibility

Reeve says township missed composting funding boat that brush cannot be burnt. The township has arranged for a company to come in to chip the brush and remove it. He noted, however, that it is still legal to burn on your own property, as long as you have a permit.

Recycling costs have proven prohibitive thus far; however, he agreed to look into the possibility of making an arrangement with Minden or Sherborne, which already have recycling facilities. He regretted that the township had "missed the boat" on getting funding for individual composters.

Trent-Severn Waterway, and key members of the management planning team at Waterway headquarters in Peterborough. Bill Brown and John Perkins of the Trent-Severn Reservoir Lakes Council (and the Hawk/Hall's association) were also present. "The management planning process is a chance to make changes," he said. "We felt this was a very productive meeting and have scheduled another one, to take place at the Stanhope municipal offices on September 25th."

At the conclusion of his remarks, a member rose to thank Gardner and the council for the care given this year to the maintenance of the Hawk River Road. Rob Hartrey, the incoming president, also thanked council members and Gerald Bain, the township clerk, for their co-operation on a number of projects.

Since this meeting marks the end of his term as president, Bill Jamieson has taken on the role of Lake Steward. In this new program, which is a joint venture between FOCA and the Ministry of Natural Resources, one person from each association is designated as the "resident expert". Jamieson received a box of information providing all the data the ministry has on the three lakes, including water quality and fish stocks. He also received a series of brochures, now unavailable, on everything from fishing and wildlife to insects and trees. He invited anyone who has a question or a problem to contact him. "I think this program is going to be a great asset to everyone," he concluded.

The meeting also dealt with a number of other items: A motion was unanimously approved empowering the executive to proceed with the implementation of and purchase of signs for the road- and cottage-numbering system.

Water quality readings remain the same as in previous years, but getting reports from the Ministry of the Environment has proven frustrating.

The association is in sound financial shape. During the past year, money was donated to the Sandy Bannon Memorial Fund and the Trent-Severn Reservoir Lakes Council.

Fishing trophies were handed out; Fred Wilburne won yet again in the lake trout category.

The slate of officers for 1992/93 was approved:

Speed Limit Signs

Gardner said that the Hawk/Hall's association was the only one of the three in the township that had taken council up on its offer to pay for half the cost of speed limit signs to be posted along waterways. Each sign costs $100, including taxes.

Gardner said he had asked to be county council's representative on the Haliburton Highlands Water Management Advisory Committee (HHWMAAC) and is now chairman. On July 10th, the committee met with John Lewis, Superintendent of the

We have to change says ex-president

ing Bill Jamieson for doing "a fabulous job" during his two-year term as president. "We'd have to look far and wide to find someone who knows more or cares more about the environment," he said.

Hartrey then moved to a brief of overview of history since his father first came to the area as a cottager in 1951. "Times have changed," he said, "but much remains the same. Yet that is a deceptive view of the environmental reality. It's going to take a lot more work and we're going to have to change our ways if we want to keep our lakes the way we like them. For example, water levels are going to continue to plague us. But we have new threats like acid rain, alien insects, pollution, and market value assessment. There's been little development proposed in the last two years, thanks to the recession, but it will come when the economy picks up. We're prime.

"There are a lot of problems out there we're going to have to be more aware of. Dealing with them is going to mean changing our habits, becoming more aware, and being more active politically. And we're going to have to it year-round. It's also going to mean doing things we're uncomfortable with, like approaching people to ask them to join the association, or to stop washing in the lake, or to stop speeding. In the case of speeding, it may mean going to court. I'm uncomfortable with those things, but they will have to be done.

"We have to combine our collective strength with individual action. But this place is lovely and it's worth it."

By this time, the sun had emerged and the meeting adjourned, sending members back to their homes and cottages to enjoy an unprecedented fourth straight day of sunshine.

County approval of MVA unlikely, Berry tells property association the program has continued to rise and instead of being paid for the material being recycled the township is now charged tipping fees on some loads, because there is little or no demand for the newsprint, glass and cans being collected.

"The government has not pushed hard enough for markets," he said. "I don't think we're ready for recycling." Berry did voice his support for home composting as a means to reduce the amount of waste entering the landfills and said he operates a composter at his home.

Anthon disagreed with Berry's assessment of recycling.

"Recycling is here to stay. We can never go backward," she said. "I hope we have to pay until it hurts because the more it hurts, the less we'll take to the dump."

Anthon, who sits on the municipality's environmental advisory committee, also wants to see improvements in the condition of the landfill site, which she says "is in a mess most of the time."

"I'm only one voice on council and we don't always agree where money will be spent," she said.

Berry mentioned the fact that Minden has a card system to restrict access to the dump by non-residents.

"You people pay taxes to use the dump and we want to make sure you are the only people who do use it," he said. He told the association that the municipality is no longer accepting tires or large appliances at the landfill, but these items can be dropped off at Harding Iron and Metal.

MVA unlikely

Reeve Berry told the members that he doubts whether reassessment will be adopted by county council, based on the lack of support and the overwhelming opposition.

He said that when the question of pursuing MVA came before county council in the spring he, along with Deputy-Reeve Lewis Stevens voted against proceeding. Opposition to the plan has also been voiced by elected official in Lutterworth and Stanhope and other municipal councils have expressed reluctance at the idea.

MVA needs approval from six of the 10 municipal councils plus a majority vote at county council to proceed.

Shoreline improvements

Several members questioned Anthon and Berry about the process for building a dock or doing other work on the lakefront.

Berry explained that the municipality requires residents to purchase the shoreline in front of their residences before any work will be approved.

However, the ministry of natural resources has frozen the sale of the shoreline on some lakes which provide habitat to lake trout, a species which is threatened by development.

Anthon says the MNR realizes the best way to control shoreline development is to maintain public ownership and restrict the sale to residents. She said turning the shoreline over to the municipal control in the first place was a mistake on the part of the province.

Energy efficient cottages

Louise Craig, an energy representative from the Minden office of Ontario Hydro, presented several products currently on the market which will improve the efficiency of cottages and homes.

The products included motion detectors which turn lights on and off as people enter and exit rooms, outside light switches which turn lights on when it gets dark and off when it gets light, and draft-proof outlet covers.

She also said there are whistles to let people know when their furnace filters need cleaning, shower heads which regulate the amount of hot water being used and a computer system which allows cottagers to activate heating systems by phone so their cottages will be warmed up during the drive from the city.

Festival fun at Norland party

by Jerry Grozelle

In spite of the competition it had against it, the first Norland District Fun Food and Fish Fest got a "good" rating from organizer Rena Parno.

The Norland and area event, which was organized in conjunction with the Canada 125 Celebrations, had to compete with the Coboconk Carnival, the Oldtime Fiddle and Stepdance Contest in Bobcaygeon and the Homecoming Weekend in Lindsay for people. The fact that the weather was good may also kept some people from attending.

"It was one of the very few weekends we've had good weather," Parno said. "And a lot of people probably took advantage of it to go boating."

Parno has talked to some of the businesses that participated in this year's event and she said that the reaction has been mixed. Some indicated that the festival didn't increase their customer traffic appreciably while others thought that their business had picked up because of it.

For a first-time event, Parno is happy with the turnout, although two of the events, the fishing derby and the canoe race saw a disappointing attendance.

Only three teams entered the canoe race and the 12.5-hour fishing derby drew only 10 entries.

Rare bird: A Piaggio Royal Gull, one of only four in North America, was part of the display at Norland Aircraft Services. NAS also held a book sale for the Norland Library.

Troll toss: Kids of all ages took part in the troll toss at the Norland Trading Company. The object was to toss a stuffed toy troll into a barrel. Everyone who accomplished the feat had his or her name entered in a draw for a prize.

Norland gets its fish, food and fun

(from page 21)

"It's all part and parcel of organizing an event for the first time," Parno said.

One of the events that drew a large crowd of onlookers was the bikini contest.

A large number of contestants were vying for top honours in three divisions.

First place in the toddlers' category went to Lacey Worrell. The seven-year-old division ended up in a tie between Alanna Austin and Elyse Thomson.

The winner of the ladies' division was Michelle Butler. She faced some stiff competition from the other ladies and an imposter who went by the name Yvonne.

Sweat. Yvonne, a.k.a. Vaughan Richardson, was seen only days before sporting a rather distinguished moustache, but was clean shaven for the contest.

If the hoots, howls and applause from the crowd had been the deciding factor, Yvonne would have been the winner, hands down.

The multi-family yard sale was also a big success, with a steady stream of people filing through.

The four corners area of Norland was busy most of the weekend with people taking in the pizza and French fry eating contests, the pool tournament, troll toss, barbecue and other attractions.

Like most first-time events, the organizers have learned from their mistakes and changes will be made to make future festivals even better. One change that Parno is sure will help is a change in the weekend that it will be held. She is looking into the possibility of moving the event ahead one week to coincide with the Coby Festival (as opposed to the Carnival), which was held one week earlier.

A theme for next year's festival is as yet undecided but the topic will be discussed when the organizers gather for a wrap-up meeting. Parno says the meeting will be soon, while everything is still fresh in their minds.

Draw winners

Louise Hanson of Ajax was the winner of the draw for $125. Her ballot was drawn from the box containing the eligible entrants who got at least 12 endorsements from participating businesses or organizations. Additional cash prizes of $12.50 each went to William Edy of Norland, Jennifer Francis of Scarborough, Steve Hanson of Ajax, Shirley Smith of Norland and John Johnston of Kirkfield. The free aerial tour, compliments of Norland Aircraft Services, was awarded to the 125th person to register. Earl and Doris Bartley of Norland were the winners of the scenic flight.

Special Occasions a playful winner

by Susan Wilson

"With all the divorces there are today, people have to learn to reframe their relationships so they can retain their affection."

With those words, in the mouth of his character Michael Ruskin, playwright Bernard Slade sums up the essence of his play Special Occasions. It is being presented as part of a dinner-theatre package at the Harvest Dining Lounge in Haliburton village by Haliburton County Resort Productions.

John Miller and Heather Scully co-star as Michael and Amy Ruskin, an ordinary middle-class couple with an ordinary middle-class marriage, three ordinary middle-class children, and, before the end of the first scene — at their 15th wedding anniversary party — an ordinary middle-class divorce. Over the next ten years, they meet from time to time on special occasions — funerals, graduations, Christmas, family crises. Hence the name of the play. During that decade, and through those occasions, they come to a better understanding of both themselves and each other, and emerge as good friends — better friends than they ever were (or maybe could have been) in marriage.

The process is a painful one for them both. Amy's drinking gets worse, until she finally turns to Alcoholics Anonymous for help. Michael comes close to re-marriage, but gets dumped within days of reaching the altar. Their children (whom we meet only through their parents' conversation) go through growing pains common to our time. But everyone survives — older, wiser, but not really sadder. More content, actually, and with their sense of humour intact.

For lest you think that this is another dreary drama from the kitchen sink, be assured that the play is full of wit and warmth. (Slade is also the author of the well-known Same Time, Next Year, which employs the same mix of emotions.) The characters, and their predicaments and reactions, often provoked laughter of recognition from the audience. Miller is particularly hilarious in a scene where he plays a most convincing drunk — and fools both us and Amy!

Amy Ruskin (Heather Scully) and Michael Ruskin (John Miller) finally become friends after 15 years of marriage and 10 years of divorce. Scully and Miller are starring in Special Occasions, a Dinner-Theatre presentation at the Harvest Dining Lounge.

Both actors have a convincing, naturalistic style that is essential in such an intimate setting. (The restaurant's upstairs bar has been transformed into a 40-seat theatre and the first row is mere feet from the stage.)

Neither of them is afraid of silence either, creating the pauses that fill normal conversation and using them to convey meanings that are never spoken. If there were flubs in the script, this naturalism (and their skill) also served well to paper over the cracks and keep the audience at ease.

The play, directed by Scully, uses a minimalist all-black set to suggest a number of locations, from their Santa Barbara home to a theatre lobby and a hospital room. The audience is invited to work with the actors by using their imaginations to set the scene. That imagination is aided by Glen Scully's able handling of the lighting and sound effects.

Special Occasions is currently scheduled to run only for two more Thursday evenings, August 6th and 13th. However, if there is sufficient interest, the run can be extended. It is to be hoped that this interest materializes, for Miller and Scully have put a lot of work into creating this show and it deserves more than a couple of airings. (By all reports, dinner was excellent too.)

Special Occasions continues on Thursdays, August 6th and 13th, at 8:00 p.m. If there is sufficient demand, the run will be extended. Dinner is served 6:15 p.m. Reservations are required; call 457-2700.

Date set for next year's derby

Thanks to the continuing support of race sponsor Martin Pet Foods Inc. of Elmira, Ontario, the ninth running of the Minden Techni-cal Challenge will take place this winter.

The Minden Sled Dog Derby Committee has announced that the 1993 edition of the world's largest limited-class speed race for sled dogs will be held on January 9 and 10 in Minden.

In addition to the purse of $25,100, Martin Pet Foods (makers of Techni-cal Dog Food) is providing $16,000 in promotional support for the event, for a total of $41,100.

Race Governor Val Lougheed expressed her appreciation of Martin's continuing support for the annual race. "Dealing with Martin Pet Foods is a real pleasure," she said, "because they are professional and because they have been truly supportive both of our race and of the sport of sled-dog racing in general."

This winter's Minden Techni-cal Challenge will once again feature up to 75 teams competing in the eight- and four-dog classes.

The Main Street start and finish ensure spectators a ring-side view of the exciting action provided by these outstanding athletes, both human and canine. The kid-and-mutt race, which is held after the official heats on Saturday, is a treat for young and old. Everyone is also welcome to visit the dog-lot, where the trucks are parked, to talk with the mushers and look over the dogs and puppies.

The two days of racing will offer other attractions for spectators, including the chance to try out the Scandinavian sport of kicksledding. Drifter, the race's human-sized husky mascot will be on hand to greet visitors, especially the children. "Catch The Drift", a country-rock song about the derby, written and recorded by local musicians, will be the theme song for the entire weekend.

All these features ensure the special place of the Minden Techni-cal Challenge as a major event on the sled-dog racing circuit and a unique winter weekend for the whole family.

The Minden Firefighters' Association

Bill and Marilyn Wear were married on Saturday, July 22, 1967, at St. Mary's Anglican Church, (Bartonville), Hamilton, by Archdeacon Earl Clark.

A plan to celebrate the 25th anniversary party was devised by Bill, along with the couple's two children, Scott and Sandi and Scott's wife Karen. Their plan was to have a reunion of family and friends at their summer home on Halls Lake.

Saturday, July 25 marked this very special event. Guests included members of the wedding party, many of whom arrived prior to the actual day of celebration to stay overnight in the couple's two adjacent cottages.

A sunny and beautiful day, quarter century old photographs and memories were exchanged throughout the day and long into the evening, providing many hours of fun, laughter and entertainment.

Following a delicious prime rib roast dinner, guests toasted Bill and Marilyn, offering their best wishes, love and support for many, many years of future happiness. A close to the successful day was a display of fireworks which illuminated the sky and waters of Halls Lake. The fireworks were enjoyed by everyone except the two resident dogs: Bogie the Basset Hound and Murphy the Black Labrador.

Army worms on the march by Carm Hamilton, Agricultural Representative, Lindsay

It is mid July and that's the time farmers in this area need to think about armyworms.

There has been one report this week of a farm in the Coburg area with an infestation of armyworms, so other farmers should check their fields for a possible armyworm problem.

Armyworms are a common insect we can find every year. Populations of armyworms are kept under control by various predators and parasites. However, every few years, conditions favour armyworms, and we get them in large numbers, usually in a localized area, and causing serious damage to crops.

Armyworms favour plants in the grass family, including spring grains, corn, wheat, pasture and hay grasses and various weeds like twitch grass and foxtail. We would encourage farmers to check their fields carefully to see if there are large numbers of armyworms present. That means walking the fields, especially early in the morning or in the evening when the worms are feeding. Flocks of birds, especially blackbirds, observed in a grain or corn field now, may be a sign they are feeding on armyworms.

If a farmer should find large numbers of armyworms in his field, he or she needs to determine several things, including: how large an area of the field is infested?; how many worms are there in a square foot?; how large are the caterpillars?; how mature is the crop is it's grain?; and, how much damage has been done already?

A factsheet on armyworms is available from County Agricultural Offices. This factsheet gives more detail to help a farmer decide whether or not the infestation is serious enough to warrant spraying.

New jobs created in the area

Minden gets $8,000 tree planting job

Jobs Ontario Capital is providing $479,200 and creating an estimated 50 seasonal jobs in the Victoria-Haliburton area through employment initiatives in forestry, provincial park improvements and facilities for persons with disabilities.

Dennis Drainville, MPP for Victoria-Haliburton, made the announcement today on behalf of Natural Resources Minister Bud Wildman.

"The Province has chosen projects which can be up and running quickly so that there are immediate benefits to working people and their communities," said Wildman.

"I'm pleased that these initiatives will contribute to immediate job creation, economic renewal and sound environmental management in the Lindsay, Cobocok, Minden and Bancroft areas," said Drainville.

The allocation includes:

- $212,500 to provide 17 jobs (247 person weeks of employment) to replace the septic system at a comfort station in Balsam Lake Provincial Park.

- $192,300 to provide 19 jobs (219 person weeks of employment) to add barrier-free shower additions to comfort stations in Silent Lake Provincial Park.

- $66,400 to provide 13 jobs (83 person weeks of employment) to replace the septic system at a comfort station in Emily Provincial Park.

- $8,000 for a forestry renewal project which will provide one job (two person weeks of employment) for the preparation of a tree planting site in the Minden area.

In total, these four projects will create an estimated 551 person weeks of employment.

Jobs Ontario Capital is a five-year, $2.3 billion initiative, announced in the 1992 provincial budget, to support job creation and economic restructuring, to promote community and social progress, and to preserve the environment.

Crime of the week

Parts from Mustang stolen in Minden

During the week of June 1-6 approximately $7000 in vehicle parts were stripped from a 1988 Ford Mustang which had been parked along Beaver Creek in the Village of Minden. Stolen were the rear end, axle, rad, brakes, clutch fan, and the Ford emblems. It is possible that the persons responsible used a boat to access this vehicle.

If you have any information about this or any other crime, call Lindsay Crimestoppers at 1-800-563-TIPS (8477). You will never be asked to reveal your identity or to testify in court. If your information leads to an arrest Lindsay Crimestoppers will pay up to $1,000 in cash.

New labour laws for the times

Times have changed and the Ontario government is making sure that the Labour Relations Act responds to those changes. On June 4, your government introduced amendments to this legislation in order to bring our labour laws up to date to reflect the realities of today's work place and today's working men and women.

Today, women make up almost 50 per cent of the work force. There are fewer full-time jobs and much more part-time work. The work place itself has changed dramatically. Old style manufacturing industries are closing and are being replaced by the growing service, retail and financial sectors of the economy.

With such significant change it is reasonable to expect our labour laws to change to keep pace with society.

Reform of the Labour Relations Act is the key to future competitiveness of this province. In fact, updating the Labour Relations Act is just one part of a much broader strategy to ensure the Ontario economy enjoys long term health throughout the 1990s and beyond. In other areas, the government is also acting to create jobs and foster better job training.

One example of the government's commitment in this area

The jobsOntario training and capital funds were recently set up to provide help to those on social assistance or whose unemployment insurance has expired. Over three years, the $1.1 billion training fund will support 100,000 direct jobs and offer retraining to another 80,000.

The jobsOntario capital funds will provide $500 million this year alone to support the creation of 10,000 direct or indirect jobs.

Money from the fund will be spent strategically to help rebuild the Ontario infrastructure, such as highways and

Commission looks at Toronto as a bioregion

Mustapha Tolba, the head of the United Nations Environmental Program, told me that as a boy in Cairo, teachers taught him that industrial smokestacks were "a sign of progress".

It took him a long time to realize that chimneys belching noxious fumes were not beneficial. Culture, socio-economic status, religion, profession, etc., condition us to "see" the world through perceptual filters that often blind us to what is really happening.

The most difficult environmental challenge today is to recognize and change underlying attitudes that impel our ecological destructiveness. As commissioner of the royal commission on the future of the Toronto waterfront, Dave Crombie has made a bold attempt to change our outlook and priorities. "Regeneration: Toronto's Waterfront and the Sustainable City: Final Report" (copies can be obtained from the Commission at 207 Queen's Quay, Suite 580, Toronto, Ont, M5J 1A7) is the latest in a series of the commission's reports. The study is relevant for all who want to think globally while acting locally.

Crombie has seen that "the ethic that justifies moving in, using up, throwing away and moving on is no longer acceptable... Our current path is unsustainable. Both our economy and our environment are under stress; we are sacrificing the future to mask the reality of the present."

The Brundtland Report, "Our Common Future" pointed out in 1987 that "The real world of interlocked economic and ecological systems will not change; the policies and institutions concerned must." So Crombie has chosen an "ecosystem approach" that recognizes "a city is not separate from nature. Within cities we have vegetation, forests, fields, streams, lakes, rivers, terrain, soils and wildlife. Hydrology, topography and

by David Suzuki

climate set the fundamental structure for human habitation... Traditionally, human activities have been managed on a piecemeal basis, treating the economy separately from social issues on the environment. But the ecosystem concept holds that these are interrelated, that decisions made in one area affect all others."

It's only common sense. We cannot attempt to regenerate the beauty, purity and diversity of the waterfront without dealing with the consequences of development near the headwaters of rivers, of salting roads in winter, of sewage and industrial emissions, of air quality and garbage disposal. They are interconnected.

Crombie looks at the Toronto area as a "bioregion" that emphasizes geography, water systems, biological makeup and needs, climate as well as people. The Toronto bioregional watershed is delineated on the west by the Niagara escarpment, north by the Oak Ridges Moraine and south by Lake Ontario. The shoreline of 250 kilometres is administered by 17 local municipalities, six conservation authorities, four regional municipalities and four counties, a bureaucratic nightmare that has precluded any integrated policy to act within ecological principles.

The commission seeks to impose a different value system and administrative arrangement concerned with long-term sustainability with an emphasis on quality of life.

In an ecosystem perspective, cities are examined in their entirety, interrelationships become crucial, ecological "carrying capacity" must be respected, natural geographic boundaries rather than political borders are emphasized, other species gain greater importance, and progress must be measured by criteria such as "quality, well being, integrity and dignity". The most important attitudinal change in this new shift is the understanding that the environment can no longer be treated as an entity separated from the subordinate to economics and development. They are inextricably linked.

The commission has established a set of nine principles for "planning, developing and managing a healthy, integrated waterfront". Each principle is summarized in a single word: "clean, green, usable, diverse, open, accessible, connected, affordable and attractive". In an ecosystem approach, there have to be "new administrative mechanisms that bring jurisdictions together to solve problems co-operatively" and they have to be given the capital budgets, resources and political commitment to get things done.

Crombie and his commission have made a major contribution by outlining a radically different relationship with the biological and physical factors that affect our survival and quality of life. He should be encouraged to carry on with a massive public education about the basis and implications of the ecosystem concept so citizens themselves can re-examine contentious problems in their own communities.

As the report concludes: "We are responsible for the consequences of our own actions - to ourselves and to other people, to other generations and to other species."

Labour Act revised

bridges. In addition to creating jobs, capital spending helps keep Ontario business productive and that helps attract more business and investment.

The Labour Relations Act provides the framework for the relations between labour and management and it is important that we respond to shifts in society by updating the legislation.

We can't compete in today's economy using obsolete laws in the same way that business can't compete using out-of-date technology.

These amendments will finally bring about laws which are in line with today's work place and that is good for Ontario workers and for the economy.

Baby sitting course proves successful again

For the 7th consecutive year, C.H.A.C.E. has assisted families looking for qualified young caregivers for their children by offering our Babysitters' Training Course. This year's course saw 19 successful graduates in the Haliburton and Wilberforce areas. The six week program includes topics such as child development and behavioural problems, caring for the child and nutrition, safety of children and basic first aid, handling emergencies, the constrained child, games and activities, and children with special needs. Participants had to attend six of the eight classes and achieve at least 75 percent on the final exam to complete the course.

Each year C.H.A.C.E. receives tremendous support from local professionals who assist us in the delivery of this course and this year's program was no exception. Instructors for the 1992 Babysitters' Training Course were Marie Hodgson from Wee Care, Lori Rolfe of Bishop and Rogers, Marg Graham, Public Health Nurse, Miles Maughan of the Haliburton Fire Department, Wendy Sisson from C.H.A.C.E. Day Care, Donna Sutherland of Kinark Child and Family Services, Linda Blakey and Marylou Mizzan of Parent Support Services, Janet Bottum, Registered Nurse, Pam Roberts, Registered Nurse, Jean Milligan, Registered Nurse, Dr. Benoit's office and Clarene

by Sue Valm, Executive Director

Brown of C.H.A.C.E. Inc.

We extend our sincere appreciation to these special instructors for making this course so valuable for the students. Special thanks are also extended to Katherine Hodgson-McMahon and Della Rogers, both from C.H.A.C.E., who provided such wonderful instruction and facilitation for this year's course!

And, of course, congratulations go out to our graduates: Cailey Hartwick, Ainsley Heyes, Natalea Howe, Allison Kennedy, Erin Kennedy, Sarah McMahon, Kristen Schakelaar, Meggan Winsley, Amy Wood, Kaitlin Pettit, Joshua Brown, Rachel deJong, Freya Lilius, Tammy Carey, Joni Erikson, Jill Erikson, Julie Walsh, Jason MacDuff and Tracey Nottage.

On a more serious note, for the first time in our nine year history, C.H.A.C.E. is looking at the possibility of significant cutbacks in service or increases in fees at our Day Care/Private Home Day Care due to the non-renewal of special staff contracts we have enjoyed over the past couple of years.

Our members have supported us with a very successful letter-writing campaign but this has yet to net any financial results. In light of these events, the Board of Directors has called an emergency Special General Meeting for Wednesday, August 26, 1992. This meeting will be held at our Minden Resource Centre (rear of the Sears Building) at 7:00 p.m. Our hope is that the meeting will provide a venue for our members and those we serve to offer up creative solutions to our dilemma. The Board and Staff will present what measures have been taken to date and what results these efforts have yielded. Please plan to join us.

1. ACCOUNTING POLICIES

The consolidated financial statements of the Corporation (municipality) are the representation of management prepared in accordance with accounting policies prescribed for Ontario municipalities by the Ministry of Municipal Affairs. Since precise determination of many assets and liabilities is dependent upon future events, the preparation of periodic financial statements necessarily involves the use of estimates and approximations. These have been made using careful judgments.

(a) (i) Basis of Consolidation

These consolidated statements reflect the assets, liabilities, sources of financing and expenditures of the revenue fund, capital fund, reserve funds and reserves and include the activities of all committees of Council and the following boards, municipal enterprises and utilities which are under the control of Council:

Minden Waterworks System
Minden Sewage System
Minden Business Improvement Area
Minden Cemetery Board
Haliburton County Ambulance Service

All interfund assets and liabilities and sources of financing and expenditures have been eliminated with the exception of loans or advances between reserve funds and any other fund of the municipality and the resulting interest income and expenditures.

(ii) Non-Consolidated Entities

There are no non-consolidated entities.

(iii) Accounting for County and School Board Transactions

The taxation, other revenues, expenditures, assets and liabilities with respect to the operations of the school board and the County of Haliburton are not reflected in the municipal fund balances of these financial statements. Overlevies (underlevies) are reported on the Consolidated Balance Sheet as "other current liabilities" ("other current assets").

The above data has been extracted from the audited 1991 Consolidated Financial Report of the Townships and the local boards as described in Note 1. Copies of the 1991 Consolidated Financial Report and the Report of our Auditor, Mr. Gary L. Thurston, Chartered Accountant, are available at the Townships' Offices to any resident who wishes to review or analyze the financial operations of the Townships in greater detail.

Farmers can get more out of the marketplace

by Bill Olan, Farm Management Specialist, Lindsay

Producer returns for many agricultural products in the past few years have either remained stagnant or have declined. Farmers have been told for many years to become more efficient (usually meaning for them to reduce costs without affecting productivity) or to put up with the consequences. Many farmers justifiably respond that they are about as efficient as they can get and yet they require higher returns to provide them a standard of living that all people in this country have come to expect.

What is the answer then for farmers who want to increase their returns? There are several ways to increase incomes on the farm by using a few innovative techniques to increase the value of the farm products.

1. Direct sales to the consumers. Consumers are looking for high quality products that are fresh and provide good value. By selling directly to consumers, farmers can provide what the consumer wants and usually gets a higher price than if the product is wholesaled. This approach works well with Farmers Markets and Roadside marketing for fresh fruits and vegetables.

2. Provide value added products. It has long been known that jam sells for a higher price than strawberries and a sweater sells for more money than the raw fleece from sheep. This concept, applied to a product that you may sell, can provide more dollars for what you produce.

3. Producing non-traditional agricultural products which have a demand. Produce an item which you can produce and few other people are producing. If a market exists for this product, be prepared to fill it.

4. Look at markets in your own region. Often, we think of Toronto as our market without realizing that a sizeable quantity of what we produce is sold to consumers in Lindsay and surrounding areas. The agricultural products that are produced in this area are transported to Toronto and back to Lindsay to be sold. Can we cut out some of this needless transportation?

5. Look at ways to lock in profits. No one as ever gone broke making a profit. If contracting provides you with a profit, then this may be the way to go. Futures markets and options may also provide you with an opportunity to make a profit.

Even though cost control is important, using some of these approaches described above may provide a method of achieving higher incomes. It is important to realize these methods will not work for every commodity, but they could help with the product you are producing.

Grandfathers Five take to the stage

Thanks from the residents to Willis McNeilly for a lovely interlude of piano music Saturday afternoon.

Sunday Mary Guillemmin finished the book she was reading to us and started another. We appreciate her reading very much.

For a pleasant change, our lunch Monday was a barbecue of hamburgers and ice cream in the auditorium. We thank the kitchen staff and every one involved. At 2 p.m. a general quiz was held. We all enjoyed it very much.

In the evening Pat Bradburn came and showed the movies "Beautiful Lennard Island" and "Loire Valley". Pat had John Wachsmuth and Kay Cannon with her so she could instruct them how to run the projector. Thank you Pat, Kay and John, we certainly appreciate your help.

Tuesday Reverend Moll held chapel service and communion. We were very sorry to announce this will be Reverend Moll's final Tuesday chapel service here as he has been transferred to a new charge. Thank you sincerely for your faithfulness to us and we wish you success in your new undertaking.

Crafts were held in the craft room in the afternoon. There aren't many of us, but

by Winnifred Barnum

we carry on.

Wednesday Doris took some of us for a bus trip down the highway to Rosedale to see the boats on the canal. There were some beautiful boats and it was a lovely drive. We came back to Kawartha Dairy for ice cream. Thanks to Doris, Gregg, Jack, Lorraine and Muriel Marks for looking after and helping us.

The 23rd of July was Thursday tea party. This week it was provided and served by the ladies of the United Church, Sarah Group; Lynda Pawluch, Shirley Cox, Carol Cox, Sybil Roodenburg, Edna Taylor and Elaine Moll. We thank them sincerely.

Thursday evening, bingo was played in the auditorium. Amy Parker and Lisa McGann were the callers. We thank Amy and Lisa heartily.

Friday was Happy Hour in the auditorium. The entertainment was supplied by the Grandfathers Five, which we appreciate very much and thank them. The barman was Don Holden and volunteers were Ellen Holden and Mary Guillemmin who we also thank heartily.

Hyland Crest would especially like to thank Dottie Muirhead for all the wonderful treats (candy and other goodies) she has provided for us from time to time.

Please note:

If you are attending the sidewalk sale, downtown, why not complete the afternoon by coming to Hyland Crest auditorium and enjoy a piece of fresh home baked apple pie (just like your grandmother used to bake) and ice cream. August 13 from 1 p.m. until 4 p.m. Proceeds go to the fund for our new tub facility.

Trent-Severn water report

Haliburton area reservoir lakes are on average the same water level as a week ago. Many lakes on the Gull River watershed have refilled due to rains. The average percent of full capacity is 84.0 on July 20, 4% above the 10 year average and greater than 10% higher than 1991.

Most of the smaller tributaries have either been maintained at a modest flow or in some cases stoplogs have been replaced to conserve water.

The prospect for the lakes remaining above the average level seems quite good for the next few weeks.

Only drought-like conditions could cause the Kawartha lakes water to diminish to a point where significant releases of water would be needed from the reservoir.

Tattersall Road to Part 1 19-R-2333 (McKee)

PUBLIC COMMENT NOW BEING ACCEPTED

The County of Haliburton, as per the Ontario Environmental Assessment Act, hereby notifies all interested individuals and parties that, subject to public comments received as a result of this Notice, and the receipt of other approvals as necessary, the County of Haliburton Roads Department intends to proceed with the planning, design, and construction of the above-mentioned project.

The purpose of this project is to construct a new section of roadway approximately one kilometre in length, beginning at or about Tattersall Road and ending at part 1-19R-2333. The project will provide a facility that rectifies the deficiencies outlined in the justification report.

Preliminary design of this project has been initiated; however, a preferred design will not be selected until comment from all interested parties has been reviewed. Actual costing of the project cannot be determined until a preferred design is selected; however, a benchmark cost of $200,000 has been projected.

The County of Haliburton proposes to begin the initial stages of construction in the fall of 1992 or the spring of 1993. Public comment will be received until August 15th, 1992; at this time the County will advise the public of the selected design.
